What To See In New York

A.R.E. asked our participating Retail Design Collective showrooms, located across Manhattan, to share with you the best new and must-see retail in their neighborhoods.

Opened in 2013, the Spanish footwear and accessories designer's Manhattan flagship resembles an art installation. The 15-foot-high white perimeter walls feature 1,800 white resin models of Camper's iconic shoe; individual shoe display plates are embedded lower on the walls to display the merchandise. Fixtures include two large central white shoe platforms and dark gray display cabinets for a new accessories line. The project was completed by architectural firm Montroy Andersen DeMarco and Japanese designer Nendo.
